

PRELIMINARY TEXT

The words “I love myself”— but a mere whisper from within the thread of sounds forming the layer of this auditory honeycomb. like honey, pouring into your ears, covering your bones and melting your brain like a square of butter on a heated plate.

Melting

descending

into the very marrow of your being.

Your mind a puddle of molten matter and cosmic fluid flowing about, engulfing each word.

Your inner self, a little huddled being which you barely know, feebly chanting along to each syllable.

louder and Louder its voice becomes; Rising to its feet;

Standing.

A plane flies by, reminding you of the cycle of creation, of all life and death, of the greatest calamity of humanity—submission in this plane of existence. Woeful humans, woeful societies, woeful worlds all in a dormant state. For no one is truly living or has truly awoken, save for few.

People are stirring....waking inside, reaching out to the Creator. A firm grasp—a euphemism for what we really long for. And it is then, when “I love myself” becomes I Love Myself, they experience the Epiphany and Transformation and in

joy

they weep
